THE SPANISH TREATY.

Minister Foster Reviews at Some Length the Points Urged Against It.

He Acknowledges an Inequality in Losses of Revenue to the United States.

Secretary Frelinghuysen's Spanish Argument in Favor of the Provisions of the Treaty.

SPECIAL DISPATCH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 11.—[Special.]—Minister Foster, having had an opportunity to reply to the points urged against the Spanish treaty recently in THE TRIBUNE, of Chicago, has, in an interview with this Dispatch, carefully reviewed the points. The following is a condensation of the statements:

"It cannot be denied that there is an inequality in the losses of revenue of the United States and Cuba under the pending treaty, but that is a necessity in the nature of the case. Two and a quarter millions of Cuban agricultural products are now admitted free into the United States on behalf of people not of the products of the Spanish West Indies. If quantity of commodities is a measure upon a reciprocity treaty much is impossible. If the loss of revenue were the only consideration, the conclusion that the treaty is a bad bargain for the United States would be correct. There has been a desire in this country to secure commercial reciprocity with the tropical countries of America. The only important products from countries now able to exchange are sugar and tobacco. It was not possible to negotiate a treaty with Spain upon any other conditions as to sugar than those contained in the treaty. The admission of sugar free from Cuba costs $50,000,000 in our revenues. Cuba could not consume as much in value of our products if all customs products and manufactures were put upon the free list.

"But there are other considerations. One is the current demand here for cheaper sugar. It is clearly right that the consumers of sugar here should get the benefit of the cheaper article. The other fact, that the future of the United States depends upon the extension of our foreign commerce, is of controlling importance with the members of the American Congress.

SECRETARY FRELINGHUYSEN.

A statement of this nature necessitates an examination of the views expressed by Secretary Frelinghuysen. Secretary Foster referred to the President's comprehensive statement of the purposes and effect of the various articles of the Spanish treaty, and an analysis of the schedules attached to it, showing exclusively the exact changes proposed to be made in the existing Spanish tariff. The Secretary's paper is in part as follows:

The object had in view in the negotiation of the treaty was twofold:

First—To establish such reciprocity in the exchange of products of the United States and neighboring Spanish Provinces and the islands of Cuba and Porto Rico, and such mutual shipping privileges as should lead to a greater development of commerce.

Second—To remove the restrictions and discrimination to which American trade and shipping for many years has been exposed under the tariff and navigation regulations of Spanish law.

To accomplish the treaty of 1795 sets forth by most ample provisions all its commercial freedom, protection of the rights of persons and property, and the "most favored nation" clause, which do not exist in the treaty.

Art. I and 2 relate to reciprocal exchanges of products, the details of which are contained in three original schedules—A, B, and C. A cursory glance at the treaty in this respect is sufficient to show that the benefits of the reciprocity contemplated are confined to ourselves and Spanish territories. This is regarded as an important provision for the encouragement of our shipping.

Art. 3 corrects the practice which has operated to the disadvantage of American vessels in the West Indian trade. Under the existing laws and customs regulations foreign products exchanged in ports of the United States, when transported to Spanish vessels, are admitted into Cuba and Porto Rico at 10 per cent less duties than when carried in American vessels, the duties being applied to all American and other foreign products in transit through the United States. The present article gives to American vessels (including the same privileges as Spanish vessels) in the ports of Cuba and Porto Rico as to the payment of duties.

Art. 4 provides that the vessels of either country that are compelled to enter the ports of the other country, through stress of weather, may land their cargoes and repair their vessels without paying any duties, except those which may be incurred by the sale of articles for the use of the vessel or the subsistence of the crew.

Art. 5 provides that vessels of either country may clear from the ports of the other country for any foreign port without being required to call at any port of their own country for orders or for any other purpose.

Art. 6 provides that vessels of either country may carry the products of the other country to any foreign country, and shall not be required to touch at any port of their own country for orders or for any other purpose.

GOOD WORK.

The federal grand jury unanimously got through yesterday, and started East it had not been hoping to find by returning two indictments, one of them against Joseph C. Hutchinson and Simon Adams and Seth, clerks in the County Clerk's office, and the other against the judges and clerks of the Second Precinct of the Eighteenth Ward. The persons who are so unfortunately mentioned in the one of these indictments are called on to explain their conduct in the polls and that those of them in the employ of the county, Adams and the gentlemen are charged with the embezzlement of appointed for genuine clerks. For the last day or so Chicago has been somewhere in the belief that either he or Seth would have been trading with the ballots, but he thought it best for the latter, as he knew the two men. Seth, on his side, being conscious of his own innocence, would not see that the party was any other than Franks. The jury, not being able to decide between these conflicting stories, decided to believe both, and so informed each of the clerks. Some of the members then informed them brought in and gave both and the others will go through about as far then, with the exception of Chief Deputy, who is still out on the bond.

The jury after a session of such good nature was ready, and, returning into the court-room with not much ceremony, filed up to the bar, and the foreman handed the indictments to the clerk. Then all the jurors were discharged, and the court-room was soon deserted.

THE FIVES.

The grand jury met at 11 o'clock yesterday morning, and adjourned to the surprise of the assembled Democratic-Populist bail bonds when the day arrives to-day at Wednesday afternoon. They reported to both the court-room with the indictments of Federal Grand Jurors, and in order not to be outdone by the Democratic-Populist bail bonds, decided on an order not to be outdone. Then they went to the Criminal Court building and reported to Judge Gary that they had finished their work. Judge Gary thanked them for their services, and discharged them. Further discussion of the measure was postponed, and conditions of the bill for the admission of Southern Dakota was resumed. Mr. Harrison replied to Mr. Vest's attack upon the bill, and in support of Mr. Vest cited number of inhabitants should in his opinion entitle a Territory to admission to the Union. Mr. Vest replied that the spirit of the Constitution required at least a population sufficient to entitle it to representation in the House; but even if Dakota had a population sufficiently large to fulfill this condition other circumstances must of necessity enter into a decision of the question of its admission as a State. Mr. Cockrell expressed himself as opposed to the admission of new Territories with large area and small population. He would not be satisfied to admit Dakota if it had less than the population necessary to entitle it to representation in Congress. The Senate continued Feb. 11 for the Washington Monument celebration, and adjourned until Monday.

THE FARNSWORTH SUIT.

One of the greatest trust cases in the country is the New York Central Railroad. Here is a property capable at $100,000,000, which has been administered by the Trustees title in behalf of the public and a multitude of owners for many years. Its managers have been the trustees of the chartered privileges they have received from the State and of the funds of an army of investors. They have themselves been large owners, but this does not in any way alter their relations to the trust. The publication of the annual report for the year ending with Sept. 30 compliance a story of extravagance, not to say mismanagement, which is not only discreditable to the managers but throws a cloud over all American corporate credit.

All through the last three years which followed the panic of 1873 the New York Central paid the dividends of 8 per cent a year. During the late years Mr. Vanderbilt sold a large lot of his stock to the investors of this country and England, who bought it eagerly on the assurance and those of the bankers who were the intermediaries in the transaction that it was a gilt-edged security—better than Government bonds. The road, Mr. Vanderbilt declared, would pay dividends of 8 per cent a year as long as he remained in Presidency. This he meant that he would immediately cease to be President after he had succeeded as a high premium and that within the short and possible interval for Sunday's sale there after the road would cease to pay 8 per cent dividends or one at the time caused new life and meaning. But Vanderbilt has since resigned the Presidency, the dividends have been cut down, more bonds have been issued, and the report just made is a confession that the road has failed not year $1,500,000, and that it earned but little more than half the dividends it paid. Yesterday's dispatches from New York say:

> At 1 o'clock the transfer-agent of the New York Central appeared and then there was a scramble. It showed the envelope covering stockholders, etc., to the new envelope to be so transferred. Other envelopes [illegible] were [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

THE MASTER'S WORK.

Actions of the Late Plenary Council Enforced in a Pastoral Letter.

The Twenty-fifth Anniversary of Archbishop Lynch's Consecration Celebrated at Toronto.

Immense Popular and Labor at the Brooklyn Centennial Conference Ready at Rivington.

PASTORAL LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 11.—The pastoral letter of the archbishops and bishops of the United States assembled at the late Plenary Council at Baltimore to the clergy and laity of their charge is made public through the Catholic press. It is a lengthy document, but the following abstract gives the main points of the pastoral:

Reference is made to the great increase in Catholic population in the last eighteen years, especially in the West. The assembling in Nov. 12, of a general council at the Vatican is alluded to as one of the most important events of our age, and decided accounts of its work are given. The decisions of Trent are commended to their good work in every diocese, as every light seems to shed the old rays of inspiration and gets their own true star out of their course. The letter then discusses the law of the church and the errors to be avoided.

We think the time ripe to be acquainted both with the laws, customs and spirit of the Catholic Church, and with the laws, customs and spirit of our country, and we are neglectful to furnish that there is no antagonism between them. A Catholic both should be loyal to the United States, for the followers of no church has evidenced more constant delight of religious rights and practice. Catholic citizens are free to the Constitution and laws, and cannot be counted among the disloyal. We consider that schools should be established in every parish, unless the bishop of the diocese with the consent of the vicar of nations to countenance the future of Catholics. To build the simplest and the indispensable to the body as well as the soul. We consider that the Catholics of America will have to devote to the support of their schools much more than they have hitherto done. We intend to establish a system of parochial schools, which shall be under the control of the bishops, and which shall be open to inspection by the public authorities, and we are willing to pay a reasonable price for the education of children in them. We consider that schools where religion is excluded from the education of the young are dangerous to their faith and morals. We regret that the Catholic children of this country are under no obligation to attend Catholic schools

MONETARY.

The movement of the principal cities in the United States presented such a week ago were:

New York
Boston
Philadelphia
Chicago
St. Louis
San Francisco
Cincinnati
Baltimore
New Orleans

New York exchange was quoted as follows yesterday:

Chicago, 50c discount.
Boston, 10@15c premium.
St. Louis, par to 25c premium.
Cincinnati, 50@60c discount.
San Francisco, $1.50 premium.

There was a more active speculation than for some days past, and the market generally closed the week with a firmer tone. Some of the leading railroad stocks were in demand, and prices were run up from 1 to 2 per cent. A large proportion of the business was certainly in favor of the bulls, and many of the latter were disposed to realize a handsome profit, considering the advance in prices that has occurred since the 1st of November. A large proportion of the business was certainly in favor of the bulls, and many of the latter were disposed to realize a handsome profit, considering the advance in prices that has occurred since the 1st of November. There was quite a large accumulation of commodity in the country yesterday, most of it destined for the purchase of Texas cattle. The receipts of currency were small. Foreign exchange was steady, and commercial bills were easier. The following were the quotations:
